

The Road To Goodbye

Here I sit by her bed,
never knowing what's in her head.

Her fever rises as I watch her lay,
she then begins to wither away.

She won't eat.
She won't drink.
With no beat,
her heart will sink.

She is locked away
where she shouldn't have to stay.
She'll be there forever because there is no other way.

She had gone through a war.
And was kept in a camp.
And now she is trapped, in bed by a lamp.
That skin of hers, is just too damn strong.
It won't let her out, even if it's wrong.

She almost got out, but was pushed back in
by another stroke, that was such a sin.

Her son was there for her passing on.
He was so upset that she was gone.

Her road has sadly come to an end,
but for our road, it's just another bend.

So may her heart and soul rest in peace.

- Justin Sell
October 1, 2008